

OMV supports relief flights

- OMV supports relief flights of the Austrian Federal Government with Jet A1 fuel worth up to EUR 500,000
- Medical materials urgently needed due to the coronavirus crisis are flown to Austria
- Relief flights bridge failed supply routes

Vienna, April 17, 2020

The global spread of the corona virus has not only suddenly changed our social life, but also disrupted usual supply chains and supply routes. OMV's primary task is to supply the country with energy in a safe and responsible manner. As one of the largest listed industrial companies in Austria, OMV also bears social responsibility for society. For this reason, OMV is supporting relief flights of the Austrian Federal Government for public health facilities and aid organizations that have become necessary due to the coronavirus crisis with Jet A1 fuel worth up to EUR 500,000. The relief flights operated by Austrian Airlines will bring urgently needed medical materials such as protective suits, masks and disinfectants directly to Austria.

“Health and well-being are our top priority, both in our own company among our employees and in our social responsibility. This is why we support the relief flights of the Austrian government, which bring urgently needed materials into the country in such a difficult supply situation – to protect the entire population, especially people in medical professions”, says Rainer Seele, Chairman of the OMV Executive Board and CEO.
